The book discusses factors influencing the effectiveness of strategic management and leadership among NGOs. It is based on a study of strategic management and leadership practices in some selected NGOs. The study revealed that the level of implementation of strategic plans was low (46 percent). The major causes of the low implementation were the NGOs' inadequate financial independence from donors to respond effectively and autonomously to the needs and priorities of their beneficiaries; inadequate capacity of the boards, management, donors, consultants and communities to effectively practice and contribute towards strategic management and leadership. In order to improve strategic management and leadership, the book offers suggestions on how NGOs can improve their financial sustainability, develop organizational capacity and ensure more effective downward accountability to the communities they serve.

The purpose of the 'Microfinance Handbook' is to bring together in a single source guiding principles and tools that will promote sustainable microfinance and create viable institutions.

'Social Entrepreneurship' is a term that has come to be applied to the activities of grass-roots activists, NGOs, policy makers, international institutions, and corporations, amongst others, which address a range of social issues in innovative and creative ways. Themed around the emerging agendas for developing new, sustainable models of social sector excellence and systemic impact, Social Entrepreneurship offers, for the first time, a wide-ranging, internationally-focused selection of cutting-edge work from leading academics, policy makers, and practitioners. Together they seek to clarify some of the ambiguity around this term, describe a range of social entrepreneurship projects, and establish a clear set of frameworks with which to understand it. Included in the volume are contributions from Muhammad Yunus, winner of the 2006 Nobel Peace Prize and the father of microfinance, Geoff Mulgan, former head of the British prime minister's policy unit, and Bill Drayton, founder of the Ashoka network of social entrepreneurs. Jeff Skoll, founder of the Skoll Foundation, and first president of eBay, provides a preface. Alex Nicholls provides a substantial new preface to this paperback edition, reflecting on the latest developments in the study and practice of social entrepreneurship.

As China becomes increasingly integrated into the global system there will be continuing pressure to acknowledge and engage with non-governmental organizations (NGOs). Suffice to say, without a clear understanding of the state's interaction with NGOs, and vice versa, any political, economic and social analysis of China will be incomplete. This book provides an urgent insight into contemporary state-NGO relations. It brings together the most recent research covering three broad themes, namely the conceptualizations and subsequent functions of NGOs; state-NGO engagement; and NGOs as a mediator between state and society in contemporary China. The book provides a future glimpse into the challenges of state-NGO interactions in China's rapidly developing regions, which will aid NGOs strategic planning in both the short- and long-term. In addition, it allows a measure of predictability in our assessment of Chinese NGOs behaviour, notably when they eventually move their areas of operation from the domestic sphere to an international one. The salient themes, concepts, theories and practice discussed in this book will be of acute interest to students, scholars and practitioners in development studies, public administration, and Chinese and Asian politics. Reza Hasmath is a Lecturer in Chinese Politics at the University of Oxford, UK, and an Associate Professor in Political Science at the University of Alberta, Canada. His research looks at state-society relationships, the labour market experiences of ethnic minorities, and development theories and practices. Jennifer Y.J. Hsu is an Assistant Professor in Political Science at the University of Alberta, Canada. Her recent publications include a co-authored book HIV/AIDS in China: The Economic and Social Determinants (Routledge, 2011), and a co-edited book The Chinese Corporatist State: Adaption, Survival and Resistance (Routledge, 2012).

A non-benefit organization raises cash and mindfulness for causes that are essential to its originator or its individuals. All assets raised go specifically to the ascribed cause, and no one includes takes home a solitary penny with regards to benefit. There are a few individuals who might take a shot at a compensation for the organization, yet they are not going to appreciate rewards or dunk into the benefits as those will be offered back to the non-benefit. They are a huge staple for an association that has the purest aims and just wishes to assist those in need.

Non-Governmental Development Organizations have seen turbulent times over the decades; however, recent years have seen them grow to occupy high-profile positions in the fight against poverty. They are now seen as an important element of 'civil society', a concept that has been given increasing importance by global policy makers. This book has evolved during the course of that period to be a prime resource for those working (or wishing to work) with and for NGOs. The third edition of Non-Governmental Organizations, Management and Development is fully updated and thoroughly reorganized, covering key issues including, but not limited to, debates on the changing global context of international development and the changing concepts and practices used by NGOs. The interdisciplinary approach employed by David Lewis results in an impressive text that draws upon current research in non-profit management, development management, public management and management theory, exploring the activities, relationships and internal structure of the NGO. This book remains the first and only comprehensive and academically grounded guide to the issues facing international development NGOs as they operate in increasingly complex and challenging conditions around the world. It is the perfect resource for students undertaking studies of NGOs and the non-profit sector, in addition to being an excellent resource for development studies students more generally.

The purpose of this book is to bring to managers and field staffs of NGOs hands-on tools and standardized procedures that ensure viable systematic documentation, without which NGOs would not be able to earn credibility and integrity for internal and external monitoring. The book contains practical tools and procedures for beginners, mid-level and senior NGOs staffs that ensure proper understanding of modern-day systematic documentation of NGOs operation. It aims to bring about operational Standard Operating Procedures to systematically document progress on projects. Generally speaking, there are many books you will find on NGOs management, but the current book that you have in your hands is different as it emphasizes practical over theory. The book calls for a system to be in a place that ensures credibility and integrity on the part of NGOs. Smart documentary evidence by following SOPs ensures NGOs' internal and external accountability. As for example, administrative SOPs ensure the smooth functioning of NGOs' staffs by bringing forward policy tools for facilitation and a healthy working environment. Financial accountability can be brought forward by following finance SOPs. NGOs can earn approval and credibility of donors by following certain practical procedures and also can ensure internal accountability and proper and smooth functioning of organization hierarchy. NGOs are formed and perished, why? It is because they do not follow proper procedures, no matter how the knowledge you have, but it is the practical documentation of your project operation that counts. Unless and until you know these practical procedures and applying them, you never get to the donors or foster that relationship. So no NGO can compromise its practical viability by having no practical procedures to follow. Donors' approval comes with practical viability and that in turn comes with having to follow practical procedures that govern NGOs operation. So if there are no practical governing rules and procedures of an NGO, then there will be no donors to approve of your projects. The book incorporates nearly all SOPs currently in practice pertaining to NGOs administration, human resources management, finance management, logistics and warehouse best practices, report writing, practical project management tools, practical community mobilization techniques and proposal writing. So the book caters to the needs of all NGOs staffs ranging from NGO kick Starter to field staffs, senior-level managers and board members. Many key concepts are being presented diagrammatically to make them understandable in a more lucid manner and put them to practice.

The book view NGO Management as necessary to many organisations who face serious problems that block their development process due to ineffective financial management at organisational project levels. It has often been reported that organisations fail to continue in harmony with their stakeholders due to lack of transparency in management and financial operations, ineffective operational planning and on ineffective interface between the operations and finance of projects in organisations. This book has been specially designed to help such organisations and NGO development sectors professionals in overcoming their operational, planning and financial management needs. This book will provide NGO professionals with a frame work for making these changes possible. This text book is intended for advanced undergraduate and graduate students and for practicing NGO managers.

Abstract: In recent years, natural and man-made disasters have confronted the international community with its most demanding reconstruction challenges since the aftermath of World War II. Managing the inflow of resources and spending those resources well have proven to be two of the main difficulties in such reconstruction projects, particularly after large-scale disasters. A central dilemma of the public financial management of reconstruction is the need for very high levels of accountability to demonstrate fiduciary credibility, while at the same time ensuring the rapid implementation of recovery programs. This paper identifies options and lessons for managing post-disaster reconstruction finance in three key areas: (i) the establishment of special institutions to manage the reconstruction process; (ii) the selection of public financial management systems with respect to the application of country systems, special fiduciary arrangements, or donor/NGO execution; and (iii) monitoring and evaluation systems. The authors synthesize the phasing of assistance and approaches in eight recent post-natural disaster reconstruction efforts (Aceh-Indonesia, Yogyakarta-Indonesia, Sri Lanka, Maldives, Pakistan, Colombia, Grenada, and Honduras) to help guide the priorities and options for future instances of public financial management for disaster reconstruction. The paper also compares the challenges posed by post-conflict versus post-natural disaster public financial management.

International Institutions (IIs), International NGOs (INGOs) and Transnational Hybrid Organizations (THOs) play a hugely important role in the modern world economy. Despite having been studied by scholars from a range of disciplines, these organizations have never before been approached from a management perspective. This ambitious book analyzes the management challenges associated with international cooperation and sheds light on how these organizations have evolved as the political, economic and business environments have changed around them. Covering an admirably broad canvas, the authors pursue two main objectives. Firstly, they explore the main management frameworks developed in the context of the corporate and national public/non-profit organizations and adapt them to the specificity of IIs and INGOs. This leads to the identification of a "tailored" approach to IO management based on their institutional and operational settings, stakeholder groups, core business, staff profile, and financial arrangements. Secondly, they "bring theory into practice" by linking frameworks to several case studies and best practices of organizations currently experimenting with management systems and tools, with case studies including the World Bank and the Gates Foundation. This comprehensive textbook is a must-own resource for students and academics involved with studying and working with international organizations.

The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of financial strategies on the financial sustainability of Nongovernmental Organizations (NGOs) in Kenya. The study sought to answer the following research questions, ?How does income diversification strategy affect the financial sustainability of NGOs??. ?How does a strategic partnership affect the financial sustainability of NGOs??. ?How does strategic financial management affect the financial sustainability of NGOs??. and ?How does participation of NGOs in income generating activities affect the financial sustainability of NGOs??. Through this study, an attempt was made to know whether the identified financial strategies help in enhancing the financial status of NGOs in Kenya and how these financial strategies affect the overall financial sustainability of NGOs in Kenya. The study was an inferential study that was aimed to present the degree of variance in the financial sustainability of NGOs caused or predicted by the four different financial strategies adopted. Seventy five NGOs were sampled from Twenty Six different sectors of NGOs operating in Nairobi, Kenya. Quantitative data was analyzed using the SPSS version 22.0. The sample was selected using stratified proportionate random sampling technique and reduced to twenty six strata of NGOs for quality and accuracy purposes. The findings of the study are that all the four independent variables are positively correlated to the financial sustainability of NGOs; Income diversification strategies that enhance the financial sustainability of NGO?s identified from the study findings were tapping international funding streams, fundraising and development plan and corporate donor sourcing. The NGOs were studied to be developing their fund-raising activities and tapping into new corporate donor streams for better monetary support as well as holding one-time events in aspect of improving their income streams. Funding based strategic partnerships between NGOs and other business entities was also found becoming a central part of their financial development process. Strategic financial management was to be affecting the financial sustainability of NGOs to a great extent. The drivers for strategic financial management that mainly affected the financial sustainability of the NGO to a great extent included strategic planning, financial analysis and plan implementation. Participation of NGOs in their own income generating activities was also found to be affecting the NGO?s financial sustainability to a great extent. The study found that participating in business activities, receiving trust or endowment funds and receiving public contribution were to be affecting financial sustainability of NGOs to a great extent. The study concluded that poor financial management in specific categories such as strategic planning, plan implementation and financial analysis led to poor management of financial stability of NGOs. Income generation was also concluded to be a central strategy used to respond to financial challenges and find alternatives to stabilize financial status of NGO. The study further concluded that funding based partnerships benefited the NGOs to a great extent in comparison to other strategic partnerships. Furthermore, the study deduced that NGOs majorly depended on public contribution for stabilizing their financial status and therefore NGOs participating in their own income generating activities contributed majorly to most of the financial sustainability of the organization. The study further recommends NGO?s in order to remain financially sustainable; they should employ staffs that are capable of planning strategically, implementing the plan and doing appropriate financial analysis to manage and maintain good financial status in terms of cost recovery, cash flows and capital structure. The study also recommends all the NGOs management to improve and maintain their income sources from their usual source that is donors. Employees capable of identifying risk factors and those who are able to manage risk should be employed so as to be able to manage their cash flow appropriately. The study also suggests NGOs to reduce their dependency on major donors, withdrawal of which would force the organization to close down.

The voluntary sector contains over 50,000 organizations, 320,000 paid staff, and 3 million volunteers. The accounting and financial management of organizations in this sector poses as many difficulties as that of major for-profit organizations, if not more so, given the absence of the profit motive upon which much traditional accounting, finance practice and theory has been developed. This book explores the unique environmental, managerial and philosophical aspects of voluntary organizations as well as the technical specialist characteristics of financial accounting, auditing and taxation that differentiate their role. Introducing and providing descriptions of the main applications of accounting and finance applicable to the role of financial manager, this book uses real life case studies and examines the debates presented by other writers in the field. This key book helps readers make their own critical judgements, and contributes to their understanding of the distinctiveness of voluntary sector accounting and financial management.

In response to a clear need by low-income people to gain access to the full range of financial services including savings, a growing number of microfinance NGOs are seeking guidelines to transform from credit-focused microfinance organizations to regulated deposit-taking financial intermediaries. In response to this trend, this book presents a practical 'how-to' manual for MFIs to develop the capacity to become licensed and regulated to mobilize deposits from the public. 'Transforming Microfinance Institutions' provides guidelines for regulators to license and regulate microfinance providers, and for transforming MFIs to meet the demands of two major new stakeholders regulators and shareholders. As such, it focuses on developing the capacity of NGO MFIs to mobilize and intermediate voluntary savings. Drawing from worldwide experience, it outlines how to manage the transformation process and address major strategic and operational issues inherent in transformation including competitive positioning, business planning, accessing capital and shareholders, and how to 'transform' the MFI's human resources, financial management, MIS, internal controls, and branch operations. Case studies then provide examples of developing a new regulatory tier for microfinance, and how a Ugandan NGO transformed to become a licensed financial intermediary. This book will be invaluable to regulators and microfinance NGOs contemplating institutional transformation and will be of tremendous use to donors and technical support agencies supporting MFIs in their transformation.

This book deals with two major issues: how Indonesian NGOs survived under Suharto's authoritarian rule; and how NGOs contributed to the promotion of democracy in the post-Suharto era. If NGOs are to change from 'development' to 'movement' in democratic post-Suharto Indonesia, they must adjust not only their management and working style, but also their very ideology. This comprehensive study will be an important book for scholars interested in Asian studies, Indonesian politics and development studies.

With increased competition for external funding, technological advancement, and public expectations for transparency, not-for-profit and non-governmental organizations are facing new challenges and pressures. While research has explored the roles of accounting, accountability, and performance management in nonprofit organizations, we still lack evidence on the best practices these organizations implement in the areas of accountability and performance management. This book collects and presents that evidence for the first time, offering insights to help nonprofits face these new challenges head-on. Performance Management in Nonprofit Organizations focuses on both conventional and contemporary issues facing nonprofits, presenting evidence-based insights from leading scholars in the field. Chapters examine the design, implementation, and working of accounting, accountability, governance, and performance management measures, providing both retrospective and contemporary views, as well as critical commentaries on accounting and performance related issues in nonprofit organizations The book's contributors also offer critical commentaries on the changing role of accounting and performance management in this sector. This research-based collection is an interesting and useful read for academics, practitioners, students, and consultants in nonprofit organizations, and is highly accessible to accounting and non-accounting audiences alike.
