

Read Book Red China Blues My Long March From Mao To Now

the object and the audience; the role of the Other in the creation of Self and national identities; the nature, role and function of art in society; the museum as image-maker; the impact of communism (and Maoism) on the cultural history of the twentieth-century; and the appropriation of communist visual iconography. This book will be of interest to researchers and students of museology, visual and cultural studies as well as scholars of Chinese and revolutionary art.

This book provides the first detailed analysis of a distinctive element of Chinese foreign policy, waishi, the external policies intended to influence and control both foreigners themselves as well as Chinese citizens' contact with and perception of outsiders. The term also comprises China's external relations—both official state-to-state and unofficial or 'people-to-people' diplomacy. Anne-Marie Brady argues that by encompassing all matters related to foreigners and foreign things, not merely diplomacy, waishi has proven to be one of the most effective tools in the CCP's repertoire for building and then sustaining its hold on power. The author's groundbreaking research is based on a previously unexplored genre of classified waishi materials, extensive interviews with waishi officials and foreign participants of the system, as well as extensive archival research.

Please note that the content of this book primarily consists of articles available from Wikipedia or other free sources online. Commentary (books not included). Pages: 34. Chapters: Analysis of Chinese Macroeconomy, A Mortal Flower, A Year In Upper Felicity, Birdless Summer, Chinese Destinies, Chinese Lessons, Death by a Thousand Cuts (book), De Christiana expeditione apud Sinas, Encyclopaedia Sinica, Flora Sinensis, History of Ming, Hungry Ghosts: Mao's Secret Famine, Life and Death in Shanghai, One's Company, On China, Praying for Power: Buddhism and the Formation of Gentry Society in Late-Ming China, Red China Blues: My Long March from Mao to Now, Red Star Over China, Stilwell and the American Experience in China, 1911-45, Tao: On the Road and on the Run in Outlaw China, The Good Women of China, The New Chinese Empire, The Party: The Secret World of China's Communist Rulers, The River at the Center of the World, Twilight in the Forbidden City, Unbound (book), When China Rules the World: The End of the Western World and the Birth of a New Global Order, Will the Boat Sink the Water, Yeolha Ilgi.

In 1972, Jan Wong became one of only two Westerners admitted to Beijing University at the height of the Cultural Revolution. One day, a student, Yin Luoyi, sought Jan's assistance in going to the United States. Wong, then a starry-eyed Maoist, reported Yin to the authorities. Yin promptly disappeared. Now, thirty-three years later, Wong returns to Beijing to search for the woman who has haunted her conscience. She hopes to apologise, perhaps somehow to try to make amends. At the very least, she wants to find out whether Yin has survived. Preoccupied by the past, fascinated by China's present and future, Jan Wong searches out old friends, foes and comrades in this half-familiar city, finally uncovering the truth about the woman she wronged. Chinese Whispers tells a unique and unforgettable story of communism and capitalism, of guilt and atonement, of remembering and forgetting.

Examines Chinese religious rituals, literature, performing arts, fine arts, food, clothing, architecture, housing, family life, holidays, festivals, and social customs.

The author's memoir of her six-year romance with Maoism follows her education at Beijing University, her marriage to an American draft-dodger, and disillusionment in the face of Chinese communist rule

Provides a useful overview of literature on the Chinese Cultural Revolution, including a broad range of topics from the military, education, and religion to economics, foreign relations, and the arts.

Brings together a set of chapters that investigate the communication practices through which Chinese societies are creating their civil foundations for the next millennium.

Traditional Chinese edition of The Hundred-Year Marathon: China's Secret Strategy to Replace America as the Global Superpower by Michael Pillsbury. Pillsbury is the Director of the Center on Chinese Strategy at the Hudson Institute, one of the most senior China experts in the US government. He has served presidents from Richard Nixon to Barack Obama. In Traditional Chinese. Annotation copyright Tsai Fong Books, Inc. Distributed by Tsai Fong Books, Inc.

The goddess tradition remakes China and the world.

This volume adopts a multidisciplinary and comparative approach to development that brings together issues that are characteristic of the lifelong scholarship of Professor Gordon White. These include a focus on the state, civil society, welfare and globalization.

Please see free book catalogs at www urls: tiny.cc/traditional or tiny.cc/simplified. DESCRIPTION: A picture book of an old fairy tale collected by the Brothers Grimm, translated into Simplified Chinese. Selected arrangements and illustrations are based on a book by L. Leslie Brooke. Contains both color illustrations and B&W line drawings. OTHER VERSIONS AVAILABLE: 01 Traditional Chinese; 02 Traditional Chinese Zhuyin Fuhao (Bopomofo); 03 Traditional Chinese Tongyong Pinyin; 04 Traditional Chinese Hanyu Pinyin; 05 Simplified Chinese Hanyu Pinyin; 06 Simplified Chinese; 07 Traditional Chinese Zhuyin Fuhao (Bopomofo) with IPA; 08 Traditional Chinese Tongyong Pinyin with IPA; 09 Traditional Chinese Hanyu Pinyin with IPA; 10 Simplified Chinese Hanyu Pinyin with IPA. Paperback (B&W or Color) of these 10 versions are also available in Amazon.

The book examines the lives of six different groups of Westerners: 'foreign comrades' who made their home in Mao's China, twenty-two former Korean War POWs who controversially chose China ahead of repatriation, diplomats of Western countries that recognized the People's Republic, the few foreign correspondents permitted to work in China, 'foreign experts', and language students. Each of these groups led distinct lives under Mao, while sharing the experience of a highly politicized society and of official measures to isolate them from everyday China. 'This book is enjoyable and engaging. The author introduces a small but dynamic collection of enthusiastic international participants in post-1949 China showing unquestioned loyalty to Mao's ideals. Equally intriguing are the alternate stories of diplomats and reporters existing far outside the mainstream of Chinese life and trusted by neither the Chinese nor the international supporters.' —Edgar A. Porter, Professor Emeritus, Ritsumeikan Asia Pacific University; author of The People's Doctor: George Hatem and China's Revolution 'A well-written survey about the variety of Westerners who lived and worked in the People's Republic of China between 1949 and 1976. This is a welcome addition to the "sojourner" literature about foreigners who lived in twentieth-century socialist countries. The scholarship, which includes the review of memoirs, archival materials, and secondary works, is impressive and comprehensive.' —Stephen R. MacKinnon, Arizona State University; co-author of China Reporting: An Oral History of American Journalism in the 1930s and 1940s

This volume of Leuven Chinese Studies intends to tackle two problems. The first is the historical framework of imperialism - until now widely applied by Western and Chinese scholars as an approach to the Christian evangelization movement in China. The theological aspect of the missionary action is seldom taken into account, nor is religion treated as an authentic human experience. In this volume two authors try to place the position of the Christian mission in its broader sociopolitical context. Scott Sommers reflects on the changing image of the Japanese occupation in Taiwan, based on protestant missionary sources; Koen De Ridder discusses the early diplomatic contacts between China and Belgium and the position of the Belgian missionaries. A second problem dealt with in this book is that of the native Christians. While Jessie Lutz attempts to sketch a profile of the Chinese protestant evangelizers, Jean-Paul Wiest focuses his attention on the Roman Catholics among the Chinese Hakka minority. Gary Tiedemann explains the material, spiritual and political incentives for conversion among the inhabitants of North China, paying special attention to the socio-political profile of the converts. In the contribution of Ann Heylen we return to Taiwan, where we are offered a better understanding of the Protestant contribution to the study of the Min language. Finally, Karel Steenbrink describes the changing religious affiliation of assimilated Chinese in Indonesia during the period 1900-1942.

Based on Chinese, Japanese and English-language archives, this text explores the historical ties between nationalism and consumerism in China.

This title explores the love-hate relationship between the USA and China through the experience of Chinese students caught between the two countries. The book sheds light on China's ambivalence towards the Western influence, and the use of educational and cultural exchanges as a political device.

A unique overview of the fashion and dress, diet, hygiene, medicine, and other cultural aspects of the ancient Chinese. This entertaining yet informative book details practices that may seem peculiar to today's students, while respectfully contextualizing another culture and time, especially one as ancient, rich, and foundational as that of ancient China. Readers are drawn in by the sometimes distasteful details—the fun “gross-out” factor—but also gain an appreciation of the inventiveness, sophistication, and practicality of the ancient Chinese. Overall, this title is a lively exploration of the scientific and cultural practices of a pre-modern civilization.

Chinese art has experienced its most profound metamorphosis since the early 1950s, transforming from humble realism to socialist realism, from revolutionary art to critical realism, then avant-garde movement, and globalized Chinese art. With a hybrid mix of Chinese philosophy, imported but revised Marxist ideology, and western humanities, Chinese artists have created an alternative approach – after a great ideological and aesthetic transition in the 1980s – toward its own contemporaneity though interacting and intertwining with the art of rest of the world. This book will investigate, from the perspective of an activist, critic, and historian who grew up prior to and participated in the great transition, and then researched and taught the subject, the evolution of Chinese art in modern and contemporary times. The volume will be a comprehensive and insightful history of the one of the most sophisticated and unparalleled artistic and cultural phenomena in the modern world.

Presents anecdotes from women who collectively traveled to over 60 countries around the world, including India, Peru, Japan,

